Cool Remote Controls + More!

Hundreds of entries were submitted—the editors of EH Publishing’s four connected home magazines waded through, argued over and finally chose their favorite products. Our decisions are based on product demos, talking with installers and users and sometimes going out on a limb for products we found to be promising. Topping our list of criteria is technological innovation, combined with overall value—and just plain outstanding features. In addition, all products had to be available. Many were announced in September 2006 when “next year’s” models were launched, and others are just coming out now.

"It's under control"

RK1 In-Wall System Controller Series The RK1 series keypads are fully customizable with labels, symbols, user-definable backlight colors that can be individualized for each button, as well as three different colors (white, metallic gray and black) and are compatible with decora style cover plates. The IR output port can direct control to systems up to 1,000 feet away. Best of all: They won't stick out like a sore thumb.

THE NITTY-GRITTY

- Comes in two-, four- or eight-button formats.
- Link two keypads to serve as separate source selector and control commander.
- Programmed with RTI's TheaterTouch Designer Programming software.
